Almost 70 years together with our Japanese customers

AIG services began in Japan in 1946 as AIU, which was the first foreign capital property and casualty insurance firm in Japan in the postwar period. Since then, over the course of almost 70 years, we have established deep roots in the marketplace and have consistently provided unique products and services to meet the needs of our customers in Japan. With the addition of Fuji Fire and Marine Insurance Group in 2010, and its own long history of business in Japan, the synergy of this powerful combination further enhances AIG's deep market roots.

AIG Japan currently accounts for about a quarter of AIG's worldwide total property and casualty insurance premiums, making Japan a very important market for AIG.

Based on our deep understanding of the security that our Japanese customers expect, we will continue to provide comprehensive support through our extensive network of professionals—support that exceeds customer expectations as we leverage our powerful "One AIG" group synergy and provide security on every front for our Japanese customers.

Sponsorship

We are the Major Global Sponsor of the New Zealand Rugby Union (NZRU), including the world-renowned All Blacks, and we are the official front-of-jersey sponsor for USA Rugby.

In Japan, AIG has formed a “Japan Rugby Grass Roots Partnership” with Japan Rugby Football Union (JRFU), with the aim of encouraging children to exercise and learn about sportsmanship and fair play. The partnership involves holding tag rugby classes for elementary school students nationwide and presenting students with original tag rugby kits.

Tag rugby is a non-contact form of rugby, where instead of tackling the aim is to take Velcro “tags” fastened to a belt around opponents’ waists. The non-contact nature of tag rugby means that anyone of any size, boy or girl, can participate and it has been included in elementary school curriculum guidelines by the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology and is being incorporated into physical education classes in elementary schools.
