AIG JAPAN GROUP EMPLOYEE VOLUNTEERS SUPPORT THE LOCAL COMMUNITY IN KUMAMOTO RECOVERY

TOKYO, September 21, 2016 – In addition to its July donation* of over ten million yen for Kumamoto earthquake relief, the AIG Japan Group announced two recent employee driven and employee supported community efforts in the Kumamoto area. In true Active Care spirit, 30 employee volunteers took part in a July 2 debris cleanup effort at a debris sorting site in Mashiki. Separately, AIG volunteers organized a trip and tickets to a Japan Rugby Top League game for Kumamoto schoolchildren.

In response to employee suggestions immediately following the devastating mid-April earthquakes, volunteers from across AIG Group companies across Japan planned the cleanup trip, with their colleagues in AIG Nagasaki business center leading the planning. After the event was publicized internally, the first 30 applicants from all parts of country, with a focus on Nagasaki and Fukuoka, were eligible to participate and the trip was subsidized by the company.

Also as a result of employee suggestions, AIG invited 105 schoolchildren and those accompanying them from the earthquake-stricken area in Kumamoto to a Japan Rugby Top League game in Kumamoto on August 27. About 20 AIG volunteer employees were on hand to greet the attendees and act as guides before, during and after the game. An additional 200 free tickets were also provided to local rugby supporters. With AIG as sponsors of rugby at the community, national, and global level, employees thought the late summer match would be a great way to bring rugby spirit to the community.
